Vandals strike city hall, offices flooded

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

(Features Editor Daryl Fisher contributed to this report)

Vandals turned on the fire hoses late Saturday night at West Sacramento city hall, soaking floors and ceilings, disturbing asbestos construction materials and effectively turning the city government's operations upside down.

Damage is expected to be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, and several affected city departments have moved their operations to the police department building on Jefferson Blvd. while they wait for the 2101 Stone Blvd. building to be dried out and cleaned up.

"It has been shocking in how senseless this was," said Mayor Christopher Cabaldon. "You want to find some meaning or purpose, and it just isn't there."

Cabaldon said that the act of destruction accomplished nothing -- even if its goal was to stymie the business of city government.

"To target this kind of public facility for no reason is unconscionable," he said. "It's not going to shut down city government. It will cause a lot of inconvenience for our employees, right in the midst of the holiday season."

On the plus side, he added, "nobody was hurt and we don't appear to have lost anything that can't be replaced, and no central services were lost."

The building itself has been sold by the city to businessmen Frank Ramos and Buzz Oates, and Ramos was among those who visited the building Sunday to check out the damage. West Sacramento plans to build and occupy a new city hall -- near West Capitol and Merkley avenues -- within the next two years, and has been leasing the Stone Blvd. building from Oates and Ramos in the meantime.

One of the reasons for the new city hall construction, said Cabaldon, is that the Stone Blvd. building (built in the 1960s as a "World Trade Center" to house the Port of Sacramento's headquarters) was outdated. It was lacking modern systems -- including an alarm.

Cabaldon commented on the fact that there was no alarm system at the building.

"We've never had a problem with the city hall building previously," he commented. "There are a lot of unalarmed buildings in the city. It's easy to look at a train wreck and say, 'Everybody should have taken the bus,' but the building needed a tremendous amount of upgrades and that is one of the reasons we wanted to build a new city hall."

A police officer on the graveyard shift spotted the flooding Saturday night, noticing that water was coming out of the sides of the building and its windows were fogged up.

"At 11.26 p.m., a graveyard officer reported water pouring out of the doors and walls," said Sgt. Ron Lawrence of the West Sacramento Police Dept. "Upon entry, two fire hoses -- one on the second floor and one on the third -- were discovered with water coming out of them at 250 or 300 pounds per square inch. Upon further investigation, it was discovered that there was extensive structural damage to the building's walls, ceilings, carpets and furniture. There was some computer and electronic damage. How the vandals entered is still being investigated."

Fire hoses and standpipes were left running on the second and third floors, causing both to floors and to the ceilings below. Ceiling panels and carpets are among the casualties.

Reportedly, officers found no evidence of forced entry on the ground floor but two windows were discovered open upstairs.

Sunday morning, city officials and members of the media descended on the site to tour and survey the damage -- until it was remembered that the building's ceilings contained asbestos, and the flooding could have caused some of the carcinogenic substance to become airborne and dangerous. After that, access was restricted to necessary personnel only.

"They were testing air, debris, carpets and ceiling tiles," said Cabaldon. "They found asbestos, which was really no surprise."

Several city employees removed what files they could. A work group of Yolo Co. jail inmates was brought in to help fill a dumpster with destroyed materials from the site.

City departments affected included the city manager's office, finance department, redevelopment department and fire department. Many employees were told not to work on Monday and others worked from home.

"About 50 people work in city hall normally," said the mayor on Monday. "The bulk of them were not at work today."

A room to accept city utility payments was hastily set up at the police station at Jefferson Blvd. and Triangle Ct., and other city offices were moved in to that location as well.

On Tuesday, city officials felt they were close to choosing from among several possible places to lease space for an interim city hall. The Stone Blvd. building was expected to take at least several weeks to be cleaned up and dried out, following which city officials expect to move back in.

Cabaldon explained that the city is insured for its damage losses through a cooperative pool of Yolo County government agencies.

"It's likely to be several hundred thousand dollars of damage, when all is told, given cleanup costs and asbestos mitigation," he said.

Other losses will take awhile to measure. While officials are pretty sure they have saved the most vital kinds of public documents, computers, for example, will need to be dried out, cleaned up and examined for their viability.

Police collected "physical evidence at the scene" by dusting for fingerprints and using other means, but no news was available Tuesday about progress in the investigation.

Abandoned newborn found by teen

West Sacramentan Desiree Hoy, who lives just off West Capitol Avenue near Interstate 80, is a very bright, shy River City High School freshman who got the shock of her young life early last Wednesday evening.

"I was home alone," explained Desiree, "and I was just about to take a shower when I suddenly heard what sounded to me like little baby kitten noises coming through the vent of our wall air conditioner. I turned off the television set I had been watching and the sounds got even louder. So I decided to go outside to see what was making the noises, but it was already too dark to really see anything and I went back into the house and got a flashlight. Then I went back outside and in the bushes, under our air conditioner, was a bundle of rags that was moving around. I was kinda scared at first but I bent down and moved the clothes and that's when I saw a little baby's face. I was really shocked, because it was already very cold outside and I couldn't believe that someone would just leave a brand new baby in the bushes like that."

Knowing that she needed help, Desiree immediately raced back into her house and quickly called her next door neighbor.

'BABY SHAWN'

"Our neighbor, George Haggerdy, picked up the baby and he took it into my house and I called 911. Then the police came, as well as the television stations and the fire department and some nurses. They cleaned the baby up and it still had its umbilical cord attached to its stomach. It was a cute little boy with dark black hair and we all decided to name it baby Shawn. He sure was a good crier, too."

After baby Shawn was cleaned up he was placed in blankets to help him regain some of his body temperature and then he was transported to Sutter Memorial Hospital.

"The last I heard," said Desire, "he was doing really well. He weighs six and a half pounds and he's 19 inches long, which is a full-term baby, and the doctors think he's going to be just fine. He's not a drug baby and he doesn't have any really bad problems like that, and after he gets out of the hospital, Yolo County Child Protective Services is going to start taking care of him."

According to police reports, baby Shawn is a Hispanic male and it's estimated that he was only a few hours old when Desiree found him.

"I'm just very glad I didn't take that shower," said Desiree, "because the doctors told me that baby Shawn was already going into stage one hypothermia and that his temperature was only 93 degrees when I found him. I really hate to think of what might have happened if he hadn't been found until later that night."

"Desiree is an extremely responsible young lady," said her high school English teacher, Roy Engoron, "and I'm not surprised that she did everything just right when she found that little baby in a life and death situation. Her friends and classmates have been hanging on every word she has to say about

Supervisor McGowan unchallenged in bid for March reelection

The filing period closed Dec. 10, and there will be no challenger to Yolo County Supervisor Michael McGowan's District 1 seat. The election will be held on March 7. McGowan will win another term unless a write-in candidate materializes and manages to receive more votes than he does.

McGowan, an attorney, was elected to the board following terms as a West Sacramento mayor and city councilman beginning in 1987. His district serves the bulk of West Sacramento, as well as Clarksburg.

Also up for uncontested reelection is David Rosenberg, whose District 3 includes much of Davis and an undeveloped part of southern Yolo County. Supervisor Lynnel Pollock, whose District 5 seat covers western Woodland and rural northern and western Yolo, faces a challenge from Wayne Boney.

Judges Michael Sweet, Thomas Warriner and Doris Shockley have not been challenged, and therefore need not appear on the ballot to keep their positions on Yolo County Superior Court.

There are no West Sacramento or Washington Unified School District issues to be decided on the March, 2000, ballot.

Man killed by train—

A transient man from Calaveras County was struck by a train and killed early Sunday morning near the West Sacramento end of the I St. Bridge.

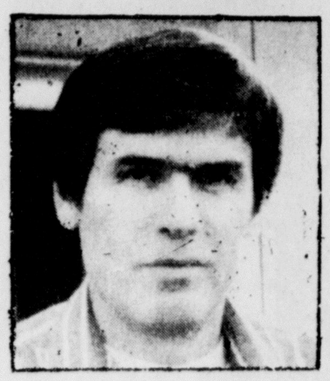

The Yolo County Coroner's office has identified the man as Danny Lewis Spahn, 44.

"The conductor said he appeared to be intoxicated and fell while attempting to cross the track," said a coroner's office spokeswoman. The cause of death is attributed to multiple injuries, and the investigation continues while other interviews are conducted.

Spahn was apparently struck by the Union Pacific train as he crossed towards West Sacramento from Sacramento, according to coroner's office and local police department information. He was pronounced dead at the scene after the 1:25 a.m. accident.

Shower routines of men & women aren't the same

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

Quite awhile ago, I wrote a rather lengthy column on what I consider to be the fascinating subject of shower routines, and when I was finished, I was pretty sure I had covered just about everything one would ever care to know about how slavish each of us can be to our own personal showering habits. In that column, I discussed in great detail the rather complicated scrubbing and toweling-off procedures each of us seem to have and I even called a trusted friend to see if he could shed any light on the topic, only to be told, "Sorry, Daryl, but anything that goes on while I'm in the bathtub is strictly between me and my rubber duckie."

Anyway, just when I thought there was absolutely nothing new to be learned about how men and women go about getting clean, the following information was recently presented to the scientific showering community, and it goes a little something like this:

How a woman showers:

1. She takes off her clothes and puts them in separate "lights" and "darks" hampers.
2. Strolls to the bathroom wearing long dressing gown. If she sees husband along the way, she covers up any exposed flesh and steps up her pace.
3. Looks at physique in mirror and sticks out stomach so she can worry even more about how much weight see thinks she has gained.
4. Gets in shower. Looks for facecloth, armcloth, legcloth, and pumice stone.
5. Washes hair once with Cucumber and Lamfrey conditioner shampoo with 83 added vitamins. Repeats whole process again.
6. Conditions hair with any number of enriching and enhancing products and leaves on hair for 15 minutes while hot water continues to run and PG&E bill goes through the roof.
7. Gets extremely angry when she realizes husband/and or children have been using her apricot facial scrub.
8. Washes rest of body with Ginger Nut and Jaffa Cake body wash.
9. Rinses conditioner off hair (this takes another 15 minutes to do correctly and completely).
10. Shaves underarms and legs. Notes that bikini line waxing will need to be done in the near future.
11. Screams loudly when husband can't wait any longer to use the bathroom and flushes toilet.
12. Finally turns off shower, squeegees off all wet surfaces, and sprays mold spots with Tilex.
13. Gets out of the shower and dries off with a towel the size of a small Pacific island.
14. Wraps hair in a super absorbent second towel.
15. Carefully checks entire body for the remotest sign of a zit and immediately attacks it when found. Also checks for any new stretch marks.
16. Returns to bedroom wearing long dressing gown and "Queen of the Nile" towel on head.
17. If she sees husband along the way, she covers up any exposed flesh and rushes to bedroom to begin hour-long process of getting dressed for the day.

How a man showers:

1. Takes off clothes while sitting on the edge of the bed and leaves them in a pile on the floor.
2. Walks naked to the bathroom. If he sees wife along the way, he moons her.
3. Looks at his manly physique in the mirror, does a muscleman pose and completely fails to notice that his gut is twice the size it used to be.
4. Gets in the shower and uses his hands instead of a washcloth.
5. Quickly scrubs everything in sight, leaving hair on the soap bar.
6. Tries to remember if this is the month he puts a little conditioner on his hair.
7. Quickly rinses off and gets out of the shower, failing to notice all the water on the floor because he left the curtain hang out of the tub the whole time.
8. Partially dries off.
9. Admires himself in the mirror one last time.
10. Leaves wet bath mat on the bathroom floor.
11. Leaves bathroom light and fan on.
12. Returns to bedroom with towel around his waist. If he sees wife along the way, he flashes her.
13. Throws wet towel on bed and yells, "What's for breakfast?"

Locals in uniform

Army Pfc. Zeb W. Arundel is one of approximately 2,900 soldiers assigned to the 10th Mountain Division (Light Infantry) at Fort Drum, Watertown, N.Y., which has deployed to Bosnia in support of Operation Joint Forge (OJF).

OJF is a NATO-led joint, multinational peacekeeping mission in Bosnia-Herzegovina. It is part of a continuing effort by the U.S. in support of the United Nations mission to maintain peace and stability in the region in compliance with the Balkan Accords.

Arundel is an indirect fire infantryman-squad leader assigned to the 87th Infantry Battalion.

He is the son of Tom W. and Judy R. Arundel of West Sacramento and a 1998 graduate of River City High School.

Air Force Airman Daniel R. Chance has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas. He has also earned credits towards an associate degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Chance is the son of Robert L. Chance of Memphis, Missouri and Nora I. Taylor of West Sacramento.

Barbara Moore leads state Enterprise Zone Association

The California Association for Enterprise Zones (CAEZ) has elected West Sacramento resident Barbara Brandon Moore as its president for a third term. Moore serves as community services manager and enterprise zone coordinator for the City of West Sacramento, facilitating tax credit and incentive programs for local businesses.

In her previous terms, CAEZ created a website, developed an informational brochure and designed a new logo.

At this year's CAEZ conference, West Sacramento was presented with an award from the California Trade and Commerce Agency in the category of Innovative Financing/Incentives as a result of the city finance departments efforts to attract businesses that were considered high sales tax generators or high-tech manufacturers.

Moore hopes to apply for an extension of the city's enterprise zone designation for another five years.

"The main thing about this program that is so great is that it helps our local employers through the tax benefits and at the same time helps our local residents access employment opportunities right here in West Sacramento," Moore commented. "The end result is a boosted local economy."

Monthly exhibit at library features works of Lund C. Tim

Lund C. Tim, a citizen of the Broderick neighborhood of West Sacramento, is currently showing his paintings at the Arthur F. Turner Library. The paintings are water colors, oils, pastels and oil pastels and they will be on display throughout the month of December.

Tim is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and went to college on the G.I. Bill after serving in the Army Air Corps in the Philippines and Japan during World War II. He also spent 32 years working for the State of California's Department of Water Resources before becoming a full-time fine arts painter.

Tim is a painter in the Realist Tradition and his works have been shown throughout California and as faraway as China, Japan and the Philippines. He gets much of his subject matter and inspiration from the Sacramento area and he recently said, "This area is a virtual paradise for artists. There is a lifetime of painting out there."

"A good example of Mr. Tim's love affair with this area," said Betty Fairbairn Sokolich, the Exhibition Chairperson for the Friends of the Library, "is his paintings of the palm trees of the old El Rancho, which are painted in vigorous strokes and good strong values of light and dark. He is also very good at capturing the character and expression of a model, as he does in "The Old Warrior", who is leaning back in his chair holding his sword tightly but gently as he reminisces about the battles he has survived. And as an avid fisherman, Mr. Tim has a special interest in the marinas of the Sacramento River and his watercolors, "Catch a Big One" and "Marina Home", as well as his oil, "Marina Drama", are beautifully represented in rich colors."

Arthur F. Turner Library hours are Monday, 12pm-8pm; Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 11am-8pm; and Friday and Saturday from 10am to 5:30 pm.

The Sacramento Knights held off a late rally by the Dallas Sidekicks on Sunday night to win the World Indoor Soccer League Championship 7-6, before a crowd of 7, 107. The Knights were led to victory by Gerell Elliott's hat trick and goalie Pat Harrington's 20 saves on 32 shots on goal. Elliott scored all three of his goal in the first half as the Knights enjoyed a half-time lead of 5-2. Chris McDonald, the Knights leading scorer, added two more goals and two assists in the second half as the Knights finished undefeated at home with 14 straight wins. Congratulations to the Knights for bringing home the first professional sports championship for the sports fans of the Sacramento Area!

Speaking of championships, the Sacramento Kings (12-6) looked like a contender this past week but they need a little more work to be considered a championship team. The Kings beat the Los Angeles Lakers last Wednesday but lost on Friday to Miami and then to Portland on Saturday night. The Kings were hanging in with these two elite teams but lost control in both games during the final five minutes. In the two losses the defense played adequate but their shooting was stone cold in crunch time! For example, on the game in the closing minutes. For the Kings to be successful this season, Williams will have to learn when to pick his shots and provide the Kings with better leadership skills, especially in the final minutes of crucial games. The Kings signed Nick Anderson during the off-season to provide them with that "go to man" outside shooting but the Kings are still waiting for Anderson to get into his groove. Overall, the Kings are still a very exciting team to watch and if the injury bug stays away during the season they should make the playoffs again.

The Kings hit the road again starting with Vancouver on Wednesday, December 15, and then they land in Denver on Thursday night and move over to Phoenix on Saturday and finish their road trip in the Bay Area against the Warriors on Monday, December 20. Next home game is December 21 against Milwaukee.

The 49ers (4-9) are back and on a one game roll after they beat the Atlanta Falcons 26-7 avoiding the plunge toward last place in the NFC West. The 49ers finally put together a game where their offense scored points and their defense held their opponents scoreless. It was almost a perfect team effort but the special teams allowed a punt return for a touchdown. The Niners defense held the Falcons to just 107 total yards! Yes, it was the same guys that allowed the lowly Bengals to scored 44 points last week! Up next for 49ers (+ 8) is a Saturday (1 p.m.) game against the Panthers in Carolina.

The Oakland Raiders (6-7) have a tough road ahead of them this Sunday when the Tampa Bay Bucs invade the Coliseum. The Raiders, who lost to Tennessee on Thursday night, now face a must win situation with the NFC Central division leading Buccaneers. Yes, this game is not a sell-out and will not be shown on TV.

My weekly picks (17 wins, 14 losses, 1 tie) improved with wins by Tampa Bay and San Francisco but I lost my first Monday night game in a long time when the Jaguars won but failed to cover the 9 point spread. This week I like Tennessee (-8 ½) at home against the Falcons and Seahawks (+1 ½) to win in Denver. On Monday night take the Vikings (-5 ½) to snap out their slump and clobber the Packers in Minnesota.

See ya next week!!

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial:

That's why they call it 'senseless'

Costs on the vandalism to city hall will certainly run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars for repairs and equipment replacement. But there will be other costs besides the dollars spent by the Yolo County taxpayers who insure West Sacramento, and who will foot the bill for the insurance claim. One of these other costs will be lost staff time -- the hours of work by city employees who have to deal with this mess instead of doing the work they were hired to do. This and other costs will be borne by you, the taxpayer.

A different kind of cost will be the disruption the vandals have caused to the lives of many of these same city employees. These employees are people just like the rest of us, with demanding home lives and a desire to spend some time with family around the holidays. They are entitled to some kind of home life, as we all are. But their private lives and holiday celebrations were dented this weekend for no good reason.

Some of these employees looked noticably bleary-eyed as they worked long hours moving files and equipment from the flood-soaked Stone Blvd. building beginning Sunday morning. A couple separately mentioned that Sunday had been their day to collect a family Christmas tree -- until they were told that vandals had struck and they were needed at work immediately.

The family Christmas trees had to wait another week.

One way or another, the vandals on their fire-hose spree had managed to harm a whole bunch of people, the bulk of whom they have never met. That must be why the adjective "senseless" is usually included when describing this kind of act of destruction.

These kinds of things are usually not the product of one individual. Two or more are usually involved.

And rarely do they keep their accomplishments to themselves; most probably there are others besides the suspects who know who did this thing.

Let's hope someone comes forward.

On Monday, the Port of Sacramento postponed a decision on how to proceed with an offer to buy a major grain handling facility at the rival Port of Stockton. The deal would involve a Midwestern grain broker as the Port of Sacramento's partner.

The discussion, set to resume among port officials Jan. 10, should lead to an interesting dialogue on the Port of Sacramento's mission. But the Port of Stockton is likely to oppose the possible deal, and resistance would come on both economic and political fronts. It is difficult to imagine the Port of Sacramento prevailing in such a contest.

Good things at schools

Of the many good things going on in WUSD schools, I would like to share this one:

Last year at Golden State, the majority of boys who tried out for the basketball team were turned away. This year, Principal Ken Whittemore vowed to offer anyone who wanted to play basketball an opportunity to do so. all the boys and girls who wanted to play on the basketball court this year are doing so in tournaments and against schools throughout the region. A minimum G.P.A. is required to be on the squad -- similar to that which is done in many other schools and prestigious colleges.

Mr. Whittemore obviously recognizes the many benefits of keeping our youth involved in such positive programs.

Way to go, Mr. Whittemore!

Out-of-meeting consensus

The Brown Act, as you have written, recognizes the right of the citizenry know what its government is doing. The staff of WUSD has had a continuing problem in giving proper notice of meetings, as you have shown. Whether or not there was legal notice for the agenda of Dec. 2, it seems apparent that there was an agreement away from a board meeting, between staff and three members, to put an M.O.T. department recommendation on an agenda.

The action on Dec. 2 on the M.O.T. staff and budget will need to be reconfirmed at a board meeting. As of now, the M.O.T. actions are in a limbo with hopes that in 2000, our WUSD staff and a majority of the Board accept the Brown Act as protecting the rights of all citizens.

Stop firing superintendents

Tell a lie often enough and people will start to believe it. Spread a false rumor about someone and see how many people still believe, months or even years from now. Ruining a person's reputation is easy; getting a good reputation back is difficult.

W.U.S.D. has a reputation for firing superintendents. I never did get to know the last two superintendents, but from what I understand, (former W.U.S.D. superintendents) Del Alberti and David Miller are doing a fine job in their new positions. To get rid of them, buy out their contracts and hire a new superintendent cost a lot of money and tarnished the reputation of W.U.S.D. and the school board.

From some of the grumblings I'm hearing, we may repeat the mistake! Instead of firing a superintendent, we need to RETIRE a superintendent. We need to throw a big party, which will cost a lot less than the cost of firing a superintendent, and make a festive time out of it. Think of the change in reputation for W.U.S.D. and the school board; we don't fire superintendents, we retire them and throw great, but inexpensive parties.

This positive reputation will go far. Many superintendents look at a job as a three-year stay on a five-year contract, get a feather in their cap and leave for the next job. Let's change this reputation. If we need look only a little further, look at the reputation of the Grant School District. Many people, including myself, say it can't be fixed. Sac City U.S.D. had a reputation, justly deserved, of hiring and firing superintendents with impunity and at a large cost.

In June of 2002, Dr. Dennis Kelleher is planning to retire. Let's throw a big retirement party, save a lot of money, and hire a new superintendent who plans on staying for a long time instead of using us as a stepping stone for another job. Our children deserve better.

Christmas Basket criticism

I'm back – the "grinch" who had the gall to criticize the West Sacramento Christmas Basket Program. Hoping the third time is a charm, I feel compelled to repeat my protest (voiced in 1994 and 1995) that a social security number is required to receive a basket. That requirement was dropped for the next three years but has popped up again in this year's community service ads.

I understand why there is a "needs" test requiring a pay stub or a Medi-Cal card (and an additional ID card or driver's license to cross-check) for documentation. A means test is always necessary to fairly administer a program directed towards those under a certain income level.

I also understand the request for a rent receipt or utility bill to validate that a family lives in our town. It is only fair that each city has its own program for local residents.

What I don't understand is why a final rule is tacked on that reads "AND a social security card." If the rule said "or," meaning a card could be used as an optional piece of identification, that would be reasonable. But to stipulate a social security card as a separate requirement means the California School Boards Association and the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce (by distributing through the Christian Center) are asking for proof of citizenship.

Government programs are forced to ask for proof of citizenship, but private social service agencies should only establish that there is a legitimate need for food or warm clothing (or referral and information). The whole purpose of charity organizations is to go where they are needed – anywhere around the globe.

Thank goodness Prop. 187 has been emasculated and tied up in the courts. I was considering renouncing my own citizenship if we actually started kicking children out of school. Unfortunately, it has created a residual fear among unregistered aliens that has driven many underground. Children are going without medical care because parents are too frightened to seek medical aid.

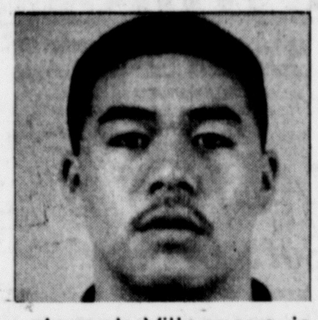

The Christmas Basket Project is a wonderful effort and I contribute every year, but I would not want to participate in any program that adds to a family's sense of alienation and fear. After all, it was a territorial tax that forced Mary to take that long, arduous trip to Bethlehem. As outsiders, Joseph and Mary were treated with callous disregard when they sought shelter at an inn. Jesus did not teach, "Love thy neighbor, who has a social security card, as thyself." The Golden Rule is not, "Do unto others that have social security cards as you want others to do unto you." And I'm almost certain St. Peter isn't requiring a social security card to pass through the pearly gates.

The Christmas Spirit (the Holy Spirit) must be all-inclusive. We are all the children of God and loved equally in His sight. How can we celebrate our Savior's birth and turn our backs on His message?

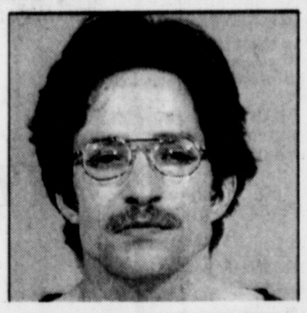

Peace.

The Methodist church in Reno has been made the scene of a moonshine party.

That's nothing. A cellar was dug under the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Sacramento some short time ago.

High school girls of Sacramento passed a resolution the other day:

"Resolved, That Rev. O. P. Harnish change his name to 'O. U. Tarnish'."

Referred to lunacy expert.

That was the disposal made by the City Council last Thursday night of the letter written by H. H. Sydenham recommending the endorsement of the Ku Klux Klan for a position on the Board of Education.

It is a strange hallucination of mind that prompts a man to commit suicide now.

Soon we will have one-piece bathing suits and flappers with great peek-a-boo waists.

When a horse puts on a little speed they say he is feeling his oats.

When an auto driver does similarly he is feeling his corn.

There is quite a rivalry on now.

Pullman cars are vieing with apartment houses to see which will have the queerest names.

You must never object to being bored.

To grow popular you must stand for it.

MUDDLED DECISIONS LEAVE PEOPLE LAUGHING AT EFFORTS OF DRY OFFICERS

the scope of the discussion broadened to include "our neighborhood home brewers" and "our neighborhood drinkers." The "Evening World" reporter says:

Piecing together the different stories told, the situation seems to be about like this:

There is a lot of home brewing, hip toting, bootlegging and boozing in the Chelsea district. Drunken sixteen-year-old boys are seen on the streets and the younger element, both sexes, is hitting it up rather lively under the impression that such is the "fashion." You can buy home brew in private homes where they make it regularly.

A survey by local prohibition officers in Washington, D. C., shows that 90 per cent of the bootleg traffic in Washington is conducted in private residences.

The Association of Federal, State and District Attorneys met in Albany recently to seek legislative relief because of the alarming increase in rum running and murders resulting from bootleggers' feuds. The district attorney of Clinton County says that "crime in Clinton County has increased about 300 per cent due entirely to violations of the prohibition law."

According to John F. Major in the Washington "Post," bootleggers are now employing chemists for the purpose of converting denatured or poisonous alcohol into drinkable stuff. Mr. Major reports an official authority that 10,000 male and female bootleggers are flooding Washington with bad booze.

The Connecticut State Board of Education has been asked by the Willimantic High School Board to investigate charges made by citizens of drinking of intoxicants at school dances.

In Newark, N. J., the attendance department of the Newark School Board has made complaints to the federal prohibition agents that children had come to school so drunk that they had to be taken home.

James M. Beck, Solicitor-General of the United States, complains bitterly of "the rising tide of lawlessness in this country." He shows that in the criminal courts—the Federal courts—the indictments have increased from 9,503 in 1912 to over 70,000 in the year 1921. Thirty thousand of these cases had to do with prohibition statutes. County Judge Franklin Taylor of Brooklyn has stirred up the W. C. T. U. by his indictment of Volsteadism. He says: "Our prohibition enforcement laws are wholly lacking in brains. . . . The people are heartily sick of fake prohibition. . . . I suggest for consideration a modified 'Quebec system,' because that province has beer and is sober, whereas America has whiskey and is not sober. I say 'modified' because Quebec allows the sale of whiskey in government stations with substantial safeguards. We, however, would have to impose substantial restrictions in order to come within the constitutional limitations of use for medicinal rather than beverage purposes."

Judge Walter Evans of the Federal Court for the Western District of Kentucky has caused consternation in prohibition ranks by his decision that automobiles may not be searched without a warrant under the Volstead law.

Raider of the Month

Doug Riggs fits the description of a typical Californian. He has blonde hair, loves surfing, and loves beaches. Although Doug, a freshman, has been at RC only four months, he has already been voted November Raider of the Month.

Doug has lived in West Sacramento his whole life. He is the youngest of seven children including his sister, Leah, who is a senior at RC. His five older brothers are all between the ages of 24 and 34. They all live in West Sacramento, so he gets to see them all the time. Already, at 14, he has five nieces and five nephews.

Although fellow students might call Doug a class clown, he takes school seriously. In fact, he is already preparing for his ideal job as a pilot. In preparation for his goal he takes Tech Prep 1. While he knows that he wants to go to college, he is unsure of which one he would like to go to.

One thing Doug is sure of is that he doesn't want to live in West Sacramento for the rest of his life. Eventually he would like to move to Santa Barbara. "The water's nice. The people there are more different than in a small town [like West Sacramento]. Plus, there are beaches there," Doug said.

Traveling to Australia is yet another thing Doug would like to do. " The scenery is supposed to be really nice and there are beaches [there]." he said. While there he would also like to go on his boogie board as well as learning how to surf.

One sport that Doug already knows how to play is baseball. In fact, he will try out for the RC team in the spring. He hopes to play center field or shortstop.

Doug is a practicing Jehovah's Witness. "We believe in Christ and living by the Bible," Doug explained. Being a Jehovah's Witness means that he can't celebrate any holidays including Thanksgiving, Christmas, and birthdays. However, Doug has never felt left out. They do celebrate anniversaries. "On my parents' anniversary everyone gets presents. Everyone gives presents, too. You know, so no one feels left out," he explained.

Everyone asked about Doug always gave a positive response. Guys most commonly responded, "He's hecka' funny," while girls said, "He's so nice." He must be, because he is November Raider of the Month.

Winter Rally '99 full of surprises

By Ivy Branaman
Staff Writer

Winter Rally 99 included games, sports , and surprises. Although the rally during 7th period was not mandatory, the gym was far from empty. Each class decorated its section of the gym with streamers, balloons, and signs boasting class pride.

The rally began with Carl Carter running around like a mad Raider leading the class competition for the highest level of noise.

Varsity and junior varsity girls basketball teams were introduced. Varsity girls and their coach Ms. Costanza performed a stirring rendition of "We Are Family." In fact, there was even choreography and Ms. Costanza and one of the players lip- synched to the song.

Wrestling coaches, Mr. Ferris and Mr. Miller spoke and encouraged students to come to the wrestling meets. The freshman, j.v., and varsity boys basketball teams were introduced as well.

The games began with the freshman game appropriately titled "The Mating Game." In the game two students were chosen from each class and assigned an animal sound. They were then blindfolded and had to find each other by making the animal noises only. This game made for both interesting sounds and sights.

The sophomore game was age-old suicides. A boy and a girl were chosen from each class to do the suicides. Basketball suicides include running back and forth through the four lines of the basketball court.

The junior game required the participation of four people from each class. A banana was placed between the person's knees and the person then hopped to the next person in line and passed it on.

The senior game, like the sophomores, involved basketball. A boy and a girl were chosen from each class to make shots from the free throw lines and whoever finished first won.

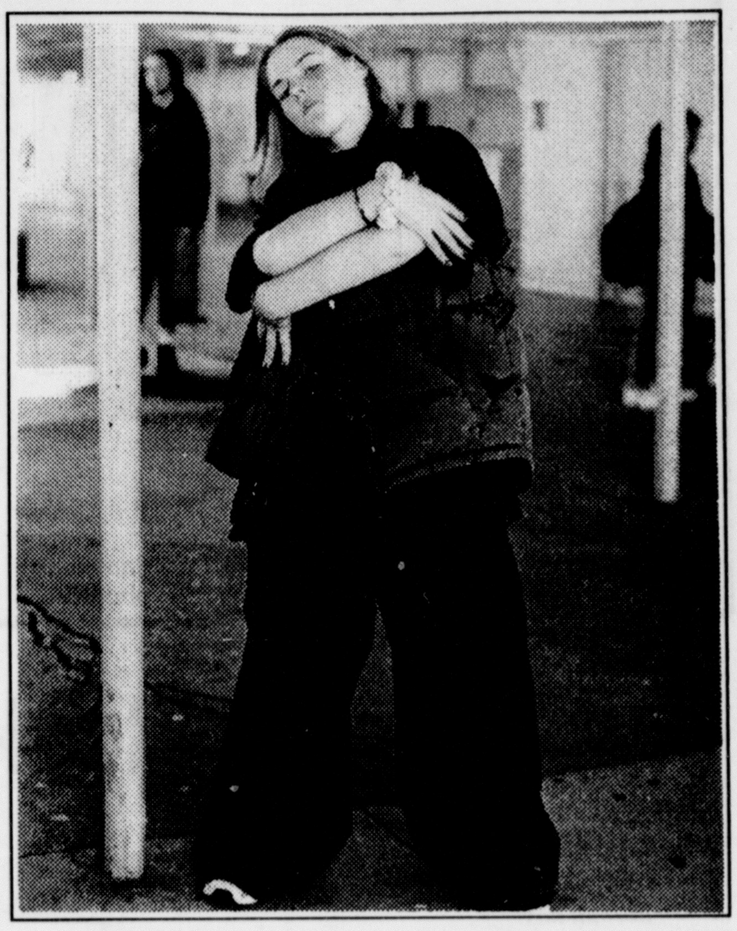

The juniors put on a fashion show, demonstrating the Do's and Don'ts for Winter Ball. The fashion don'ts included baggy jeans, and baggy shirts, a street look, and jeans and a t-shirt, what you would wear to school.

The other fashion don't was being over dressed. The girl wore a beautiful long gown and the boy wore a tie with nice slacks and a shirt. As junior class president Mugeda Ferouz put it "They look elegant, but they'll look elegant alone."

Somewhere among the games, sports, and fashion show there was a cheer-off. The seniors started by challenging the sophomores with "We've got spirit, yes we do, we've got spirit how 'bout you?" After awhile the juniors joined in and it turned into juniors and seniors. The freshmen tried to join in, but by the time they did, the cheer-off was over.

Spirit points were tallied and re-tallied to be sure of the results. Juniors took last place with 85 points while freshmen took third place with 76. Sophomores took second place with 90 points and the seniors won the rally with a total of 105 points.

For the last rally of the century, purple reigned.

Allison focuses on school

Allison Miller
Raider of the Month

November's Raider of the month is Allison Miller. Allison is a senior at River City High School. She is a former cheerleader, and enjoys playing softball. Allison decided not to be a cheerleader this year because it took up a lot of her day, and she wanted to spend more time concentrating on schoolwork and having fun.

She has a job at Jamba Juice whipping up those great grass smoothies, and is one of the many seniors in work experience. Allison does know how to have fun, too. She recently went to one of the biggest concerts of the year, The Family Values Tour, where she saw a range of different artists like Limp Bizkit, Method Man, and Kid Rock. She said, "I had a lot of fun except for the time when my friend and I almost got trampled," but she did get a real good look at Limp Bizkit's head man Fred Durst, and she wishes she had had a camera.

Allison is a very well rounded person who enjoys all kinds of music and people and that's why she was such a good candidate for student of the month.

Students act variously to bomb threat

By Shelley Tuttle
Staff Writer

During late lunch on Wednesday, Nov. 17, Mr. Geivett's familiar voice rang over the intercom and informed students R.C. was to be evacuated. A bomb threat, in the form of "a very detailed note" according to freshman class treasurer Lauren Nardozzi, was discovered in the leadership room early fourth period. The leadership class gave the note to the office right away. During the next hour, some of the R.C. staff spoke with the police department to decide what to do. The letter had to be analyzed to see if the threat was just a prank, or if it was actually written to cause harm. The note, which said the bomb would go off at 1:50 that day and ended with "Rest in peace, staff and students of River City," was taken seriously, and it was then the school was informed about the threat and students sent home.

Though the school has an evacuation procedure, the plans were old and hadn't been reviewed. "I have never seen those plans," said Mr. Geivett. A new committee, led by Mr. Hall, is now meeting to rewrite the procedure.

Once the word was out that the school might blow up, people took things fairly well. The evacuation took only eight minutes. "The students were very organized and evacuated well," said Mr. Medina.

> "I was glad to go home, but at the same time I was humiliated to be a teenager because I have such an idiot in my age group. It was stupid."
>
> --Benjamin Hanowell

The students, most of whom were happy to go home, had few problems. "The only thing was, I didn't know what bus to get on," said freshman Crystal Snow.

Many students thought it was great they got go home early. "I was overjoyed," said freshman Nathan Colgen.

Some people who took the bomb threat more seriously began to panic. "I was terrified," said junior Glenda Canas. "I cried. I was too afraid to come to school the next day."

Sophomore Alex Matthews even admitted he was frightened. " I was scared," he replied when asked how he felt. "I didn't want to blow up. I didn't want to die. I'm afraid of dying. Dying's not cool," he said.

A few students were even disgusted. "It was stupid. That boy's pathetic," said junior Tiffany Palmer, referring to the person who alledgedly wrote the threat.

Sophomore Benjamin Hanowell felt the same way, "I was glad to go home, but at the same time I was humiliated to be a teenager because I have such an idiot in my age group. It was stupid. It wasn't the lowest thing, but it was pretty low."

Many were amazed that the school had received the threat. "I didn't think it would ever happen at R.C." said sophomore Kelsey West.

"Staff reacted well, also," said Mr. Geivett. After students had left, many teachers voluntarily returned to their classrooms to check for anything suspicious, although some were reluctant to be on campus after the threat. Ms. Carlisle said, "I was absent. Of all the days to be absent, I'm glad I chose that one."

All in all, the principal was proud of the school. Although a few parents called angry that they weren't informed, R.C. staff explained it was very difficult to inform the parents of all 1,400 students about the threat. River City was commended by the community for the great job they had done. Both the school board and the superintendent were very pleased.

Mr. Fogle recognized the writing on the threat. "It was written in my second period class," he said. "I have that room."

This male senior will be tried as an adult due to the fact he is over the age of 18.

"I hope nothing like this will ever happen again," said Mr. Geivett. "The jailing and punishment of the last student will hopefully deter any other students from trying this again."

November staff named

By Vanesa Rosales
Staff Writer

Mrs. Cervantes, November Staff Member of the Month, was born in 1950, in Aberdeen, South Carolina. Mrs. Cervantes teaches the special education students English and math. This is Mrs. Cervantes' second year at RC. She graduated from San Juan High School 18 years ago.

If Mrs. Cervantes could visit any place in the world she would visit the Holy Land. The best thing that's ever happened to her is when she met her husband, she said. She felt like she had known him all her life, she explained.

Mrs. Cervantes' favorite spare time activities are spending time with her husband, reading her favorite book Christy, and listening to inspirational and jazz music. What Mrs. Cervantes values in life the most is her family and faith.

Another important fact that Mrs. Cervantes would like to share is that her son Robert Cervantes is a senior at River City and she is very proud of him.

When you see Mrs. Cervantes you will know she is a responsible teacher because she was November's Staff Member of the Month.

RC cheerleaders perform at Kings game

By Coty A. Marshall
Staff Writer

On Sunday, Nov. 21, six lucky RC cheerleaders performed during halftime at the Sacramento Kings vs. Houston Rockets game at Arco Arena. Anna Cheechov, Erin Cheechov, Shannon Fristoe, Christian Lucero, Alicia Mosher, and Felicia Ortega performed with other cheerleaders from the Sacramento area. Every RC cheerleader was invited to perform,but only those six did.

One cheerleader said it was fun to perform at a professional game such as this, but that the cheer wasn't that long. The highlight of the night was when the RC cheerleaders went into one of the boxes for the rest of the game, which one of the cheerleader's fathers had previously purchased. The Kings did go on to overcome the Rockets that night.

Buddies needed for exchange students

By Haley Moore
Staff Writer

Mrs. Connolly is looking for people to be buddies for French exchange students. There are no costs, and few requirements. The buddies do not have to be taking French because the students speak English already. There will be two trips that the buddies are welcome to come on, one will definitely be to San Francisco. People who are interested can pick up an application in Mrs. Connolly's room 51.

As a buddy you can do things with the exchange students like take them places with your family or have them go to class with you. So, if this sounds like fun to you, pick up an application in room 51.

Kid Rock wears white fur

By Brandy Sherrill
Editor

The lights dim and it becomes dark in the auditorium. The crowd begins to shout and push. On the stage there is a banner that reads "Powerman 5000 Revolve." As the band comes out my eyes are fixed on the lead singer Spider's neon yellow hair. Spider is Rob Zombie's younger brother.

Nov. 24, Kid Rock and Powerman 5000 put on a spectacular show at the Memorial Auditorium.

Powerman 5000 started the show, jumping around and screaming lyrics. They included their well-known songs, "When Worlds Collide" and "Nobody's Real" from their new album Tonight the Stars Revolt.

Then Kid Rock started playing and I ran down to the screaming crowd. The whole band was on stage except the vocalist, Kid Rock. There was a divider on the stage that had the shape of women on it. Two women were standing with their backs turned to the crowd in the middle of the divider. Kid Rock then rose up between the two women wearing a white fur coat. He handed it to the woman on his left and started singing "Bawitdaba."

He then lowered himself from the divider and joined the rest of the band on the stage. The go go dancers then started dancing and another one joined them on the platform. The go go dancers were pole dancing in cages on each side of the platform.

When Kid Rock performed the popular song "Cowboy," they put a banner over the front of the platform that had a cowboy hat on a cactus. Kid Rock was wearing a cowboy hat as well.

They ended the show playing Kid Rock's musical pointing game. Kid Rock points a drumstick at the different band members who plays as long as he is pointing. He tries to catch the members off guard so they mess up.

I was not really looking forward to seeing Kid Rock. I had already seen them twice. I was basically just going to see Powerman 5000 This was the best Kid Rock performance I have seen. I was expecting it to be the same performance that I had seen before, but the show was more alive and interesting. Powerman was great too. The show was awesome.

Letter to the Editor

Re: Criticism can correct or cut to the core, Oct.1999

In the [October] issue of The Review, I caught an article dealing with criticism. It sparked a feeling that I haven't had for awhile. I felt I wanted to write. So now, I am writing this to you.

The author of the article was correct in talking about the effects of cruel criticism on the teenage psyche. The thing to remember is that criticism doesn't only come from outsiders who do not see the real you; sometimes it can come from inside. Not to try and scare you, but we are our own worst critics. Sure, it's possible for people to be cruel, but who's the one believing what they say?

You've heard the expression, "It takes two to tango." It takes two to hurt you. Emotional damage is oftentimes a two way street. Outsiders say it and you believe it.

An example: my father, not a bad man, but sometimes a very cruel man when it came to insults. Every other word out of his mouth was "stupid." "How could you have done something so stupid?" "How stupid are you to let this happen?" "Why is it hard for you in class? Are you stupid?" There are two ways to look at this. He did not know then how hurtful that word was. Or he wanted to be mean. No child wants to really believe their parent hates them enough to hurt them like that. For awhile though, I was really starting to believe I was stupid. I was no dummy. I was and am actually quite bright. My teachers would give me compliments and I would not believe them. Because really, who would know me better, a teacher or my own father?

After sinking into a seventh grade depression and contemplating dark thoughts of suicide, I realized something about him and about me. I felt that I could get even by killing myself and blaming him; he would feel guilty. Where would I be? Dead. I started to use my head and think more clearly, think logically. I took my feelings out of the situation and thought. And thought and thought.

One day, after cafeteria egg rolls, I heard the campus aide say, "C'mon, if I didn't care, I wouldn't be so tough on you guys." Who knew if she was sincere or not, but the statement made sense. I had an epiphany. My dad loved me. He was using the only tools he knew to be tough and try to encourage me. I stopped believing I was stupid. I stopped thinking about dying and revenge. I started to accept myself for who I was and forgiving his comments. If I didn't believe them, then they could not hurt me.

Now years later, Dad is older and wiser. I'm wiser, too. I used my tough outer shell to succeed in school, college and now in my career. Without learning that lesson in criticism, I would've gone on presuming that I was stupid and wouldn't have had the courage to dream. We have a new relationship, my father and I. Without ever saying it, he knows how he hurt me before. I can see in his eyes that he's sorry. Without ever saying it, I know how he helped me. He can see that in everything I am able to do. I won't lie and say I'm perfectly fine with the world, but I am trying to help make it better. (Cheese, huh?)

In speaking with people, unless the true definition of the word is applied, I never say the word "stupid." My siblings, who are all adults now, know my feelings and they do not say the word around me either. Sometimes they slip, but that's okay. I appreciate the effort.

I end this letter with this one thought:

Although at the time I wouldn't have wished my pain on my worst enemy, I hope that everyone can look at a dark time in their lives and see how their life is different because of it. Odds are you learned something.

Backstreet Boys and Blink 182 on top ten song list of the year; Sugar Ray and TLC on top ten worst list

By Lanna Kalista
Staff Writer

Top Ten Best Songs of 1999

1) Blink 182 "All the Small Things"
Though the members of Blink are sometimes juvenile, this song shows more maturity. The guitarist, Tom Delonge, elaborated on this song on MTV: "I wrote this song about my girlfriend... it's a romantic theme for all the guys that wish they had a girl, or do have a girl."

2) " Freak on a Leash"
There is really nothing to hate about this song. is probably the most influential band in the rock genre since Nirvana. They have paved the way for countless other artists such as Limp Bizkit.

3) Limp Bizkit "The Nookie"
This song is just great. I can't explain it.

4) Staind "Mudshovel"
With the release of their new CD, Staind has a new sound. They have become more popular with the help of Fred Durst from Limp Bizkit.

5) Kid Rock "Bawitdaba"
Kid Rock has a distinct sound. I love them.

6) Dixie Chicks "Ready to Run"
These girls are talented, unique, and entertaining. They have an original sense of style in both music and fashion.

7) The Offspring "She's Got Issues"
The Offspring have been around for a while and they haven't changed their music style to please the teenyboppers.

8) Red Hot Chile Peppers "Scar Tissue"
They have made a comeback this year. Supposedly, they have cleaned up their act.

9) Eminem and Dr. Dre "Guilty Conscience"
I usually don't care for rap but this song doesn't bother me.

10) Backstreet Boys "I Want It That Way"
I hate the Backstreet Boys but you have to respect anyone who makes that much money off obsessive, adolescent girls and their parents.

Bottom Ten Worst Songs of 1999

1) Sugar Ray "Every Morning"
This is the most overplayed, over rated, pathetic song I have ever heard in my life. Sugar Ray used to have some self-respect until they sold out to make a couple of bucks from annoying teenyboppers.

2) Venga Boys " We Like To Party"
This song is probably the most lyrically challenged song ever. They just repeat the same irritating lines over and over again.

3) TLC "No Scrubs"
This song shows how hypocritical TLC is. Why would you complain about guys without money when you went bankrupt just a few years before?

4) The Goo Goo Dolls "Slide"
When this song became popular I think the radio stations conducted an experiment: how many times can you play the same mediocre song before the listeners start checking themselves into mental institutions?

5) Len "Steal My Sunshine"
It's a perky, optimistic, catchy song that makes me nauseous.

6) Smash Mouth " All Star"
This song was tolerable the first hundred times the radio stations played it.

7) Lenny Kravitz "American Woman"
I just hate this song.

8) LFO "Summer Girls"
Okay, so they like Abercrombie and Fitch. No one really cares. I cannot believe it takes four and a half minutes to describe your taste in clothing.

9) Will Smith "Wild West"
This song is terrible. But do you know what's worse? The video. It's like the Energizer bunny. It just keeps going, and going, and going.

10) Lou Bega "Mambo Number Five"
Is this guy a pimp or something?

Fans go loco over Ricky's 'bon-bon'

By Jennifer Fiddler
Co-Editor

It was a really cold night waiting outside Arco Arena. I got there at 6:00, and there was already a huge line going around the building. Unfortunately, the concert wouldn't start for another two hours. KSFM 102.5 and KDND 107.9 were both there trying to get all the Ricky Martin fans ready to shake their "bon-bons". Both radio stations were giving away free key rings and key chains.

Jessica Simpson opened for Ricky Martin. Jessica Simpson really only has that one hit, I Wanna Love You Forever. She first started with a fast song that kind of got the crowd going, but she completely messed up her choreography, and then started to laugh about it! After that she just stuck to singing and left the dancing to her dancers.

After a 20 minute break, the lights flashed and Livin' La Vida Loca filled the arena. Ricky Martin appeared in his cute leather pants, one of those tight silver shirts, and on the hood of one of those classic cars.

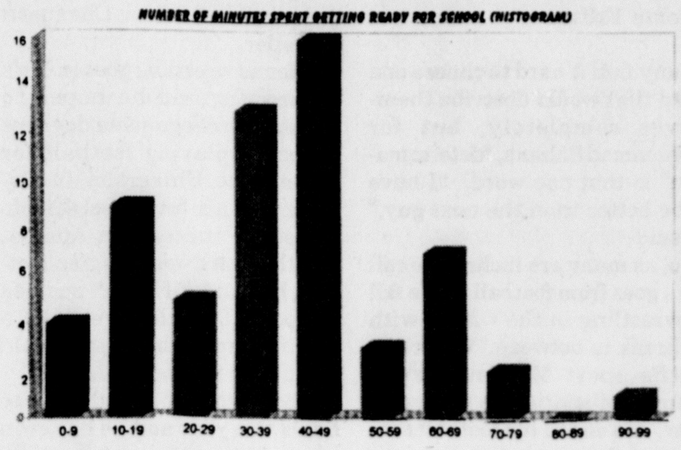

This was one of the best concerts that I have been to. The dancers and Mr. Martin I thought did exceptionally well with their choreography. He was shaking all over the stage. One time he raised his arms and was shaking his hips, and we got to see his underwear. YEAH!!!

Even though about 75% of the songs he sang were in Spanish, I was still able to understand them, probably because I am in my fourth year of Spanish here at RC. The only bad part was the price of the tickets. I paid $60.00 per seat for third row upper level seats. (My friends and I had a total of five seats!!) Just a little expensive!! And with 1,500 people there, the concert wasn't even sold out.

Ricky Martin totally loves his fans. He had the entire arena stand up and he taught us a little salsa. And when he sang She's All I've Ever Had, he took a girl from the front row and let her sit with him on the couch for a little while during the song. How cute!

I can't wait until Ricky Martin comes back to Sacramento!!

How long do you take to get ready ?

By Jennifer Fiddler
Co-Editor

Here he comes walking toward you. His hair is perfect, his clothes neatly ironed, and his five o'clock shadow has been shaved off. WOW! And then you turn the corner, and there she is. Her hair is up in a dirty, sloppy ponytail, she has on baggy sweats, and she has unsuccessfully tried to apply make-up at the last minute. YUCK!

Now you probably compare the two in your mind and wonder, "How long does it take River City students to get ready to go to school?"

In a recent survey, statistics students Marsha Russo and Sisomphone Vadisirisak answered this question.

This survey indicated that a typical student spends between 30 and 45 minutes to get ready for school in the morning. There were also several students who spent very little time getting ready for school. And two students took 90-99 minutes to get ready.

Ten things to do on New Year's Eve

Fur is in style, darling

By Zigue Goregeous
Staff Writer

Fur, DARLING...it's in style now. The big question: should we wear it? Other than the fact that anything other than subtle looks tacky, people object to the destruction of poor, little animals. We kill them to take their lovely coats and that is animal cruelty.

Ha! Those stinky animals deserve to die if you ask me. Their coats are beautiful, and we, humans, the most superior species on Earth, deserve to wear their coats.

You see, there are all sorts of things to help further their species. Teams of specialists around the world keep endangered species alive. They use methods such as artificial insemination and invitro fertilization to keep these animals with the pretty coats alive and kickin'. For example, they can transfer the embryo of a cheetah to the uterus of a house cat. Therefore, a cheetah is born to Fluffy, and all is well. They can make test tube babies, they can make them mate in captivity (the zoo), blah, blah, blah... There are even lovely animals who reproduce SO MUCH that zoos, such as the Bronx zoo, have to give them CONTRACEPTIVES! So tigers in Brooklyn have oral and venal doses of progesterone.

So don't worry. WEAR FUR. But don't be tacky...don't overdo. I don't want to see it. Be glamorous. Quite why I ever decided to do this article is lost in the mists of time. How this even applies to you, I'm not sure. You all seem so very fond of wearing last year's fashions!

Sincerely Sephora

Dear Sephora,

There is this one chick that I know, and she has a huge problem. She doesn't want to go on a date with me just because I told her that if she wanted to go with me she had to fix a few things first. I mean, what is up with not wearing any make-up and her stringy hair? I may have suggested that she have it colored and cut before she can be seen with me. I do have a reputation to keep. After all, I am the captain of the team, class rep., and one of the most popular guys in school. What's this chick's problem? How could she not want to go out with me? She honestly can't do much better.

Sincerely,
Finest of the Fine

Dear Finest of the Fine,

It's great that you have confidence in yourself, but you don't have to be a jerk about it. You're not better than everyone else, fool! But, you do have the biggest ego in the school. Obviously this girl has a sense of self-worth if she will not change herself just for a date with you. You must not like her that much if she isn't perfect just the way she is. Maybe you're the one who needs to change. Perhaps you really aren't that happy with yourself, if you expect others to change for you!!!

Sincerely,
Sephora

TRL influences teens; teens influence TRL

By Ivy Branaman
Staff Writer

Nearly twenty years ago MTV, or Music Television, was created and broadcast to our nation. Eighteen months ago TRL, also known as Total Request Live, was broadcast to a nation of teens hungry for something to call their own. TRL is a one-and-a-half hour show that takes video requests through phone calls and e-mail. The top ten requests are then played. The show's host, Carson Daly, interviews the hottest celebrities between videos. Some celebrities even take on the job of hosting the show. Fans gather in New York's Times Square, below the studio. A select few are chosen to be members of the TRL audience.

The format for the show may seem worn-out, but it has struck a cord with teens everywhere. Teens are rushing to get their votes counted. Some even make the trip all the way to New York City just to show some love for their favorite artist or simply to be seen.Though all the vidoes are of different musical styles, and some songs even lyrically offensive, they all have the same theme. All the videos are in one way or another related to teens and the problems they face. Videos that have topped the TRL request lists include ". . . Baby One More Time" by Britney Spears, Kid Rock's "Bawitdaba," and Ricky Martin's famous "Livin' La Vida Loca." These then little-known artists were brought to teens' attention by TRL, and the viewers' requests. Who's to say we would even know the song and/or artist without TRL?

Not only does the show influence the music scene, it also has influence on movies, and fashion. Whether it's an actor promoting his latest movie or what an artist is wearing in the video, teens are watching, and following. For example, Ricky Martin wore karma beads in "Livin' La Vida Loca" video and now they're the hottest trend. Teens influence TRL, and TRL influences teens.

However, the fate of The New Kids On The Block proves just how fickle teens are. One day they're in love with something or someone, and the next they're not. Perhaps this show, like many others, will grow old and stale. Or, will Carson Daly and TRL become ageless like Dick Clark and American Bandstand?

Spanish teacher lived in Argentina for a year

By Ivy Branaman
Staff Writer

"Teaching Spanish challenges me; I love it!" exclaimed Spanish I teacher Ms. Amber Johnson. She returned to RC two months after her son, Kale, was born. She missed her students while she was gone. In fact, she said, " I was glad when I came back. . . I missed the kids."

Senora Johnson attended Sac State where she majored in social science and minored in Spanish. Although she equally loves both subjects, she chose to teach Spanish because it's fun and interesting. She feels that it gives her more freedom as a teacher. "It's not a required class, so the kids have more fun and they want to be there," she said. Before working at RC she worked as a substitute teacher for two years. She then taught at three different high schools before coming here.

Ms. Johnson grew up in the foothills. There she had horses and began riding at age four. Her love for horses grew and is now so strong that she keeps eight of them on her mother-in-law's ranch.

Perhaps her love for horses is why she's so fascinated by the gaucho, that Argentine cowboy. However, the gaucho is not the only thing about Argentina that she loves. "The people there are so nice and beautiful. The language is so beautiful," she said. "It's exotic and undiscovered. It's just an amazing country," she concluded.

She would know. Ms. Johnson lived in Argentina for a year. She feels that it is important for language teachers to know about the countries and cultures of the language they are teaching. Ms. Johnson has also been to Spain, Uruguay, and Brazil. "They are very passionate people," she said of Brazilians.

"I love traveling," she said. That's why she would also like to visit Venezuela and Mexico.

" I also want to go back to Argentina," she said with a look of longing in her eyes.

Even though her love and passion for the Spanish language is apparent, she only teaches four periods of Spanish I each day. After all, she must go home and take care of her son, for whom her love is equally evident.

Mohammad Salman hopes to go to state wrestling finals

By Olivia De Mars
Sports Editor

Many find it hard to choose one word that would describe themselves completely, but for Mohammad Salman, "determination" is that one word. "I have to be better than the next guy," he said.

Mo, as many are inclined to call him, goes from football in the fall to wrestling in the winter with no break in between. Wrestling is the sport Mo never even thought of joining his freshman year. He ended his football season and then went over to freshman basketball, but Coach Brooks cut him from the team and, in search of another winter sport, Mo went over to wrestling where he has been every fall since. Mo admitted, "I have to thank Coach Brooks for cutting me from the basketball team when I was a freshman because I would never have joined wrestling."

Since Mo has been wrestling he has won titles including 1998 G.E.L. Champion Wrestler, 1998 First Team All-League Wrestling, and he even made San Joaquin Small Schools Champion Wrestler.

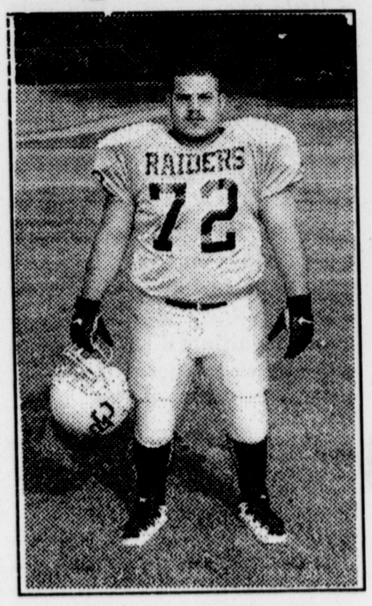

As far as wrestling goes in Mo's future, he said he hopes to wrestle in college some day, but plans on playing football for Willamette University in Oregon. For his future career Mo hopes to succeed in sports, whether it is wrestling or football, but said, "If I don't succeed in sports I would love to be a sports therapist because I would want to be around athletes."

Mo hopes to go to wrestling state finals this year and he has even created himself a new motto to help get him there. It's "straight to state."

"Mo is a good kid, with the potential to do a lot of great things this season," said Mr. Miller, Mo's wrestling coach. "He has made a tremendous contribution to the team in the past, winning lots of matches and tournament places. Last year he was the first small-school section champion in RCHS history, so I am hoping to see him go to state this year."

To add to Coach Millers comment, Coach McIntyre said, "Mo is a hard-working individual. He leaves his heart on the field every game, and plays till he no longer can. He's the type of player I like to coach."

Many people see Mo as an all out-athlete and they don't see that "there is a kinder side to me," he said.

Jayvee basketball goes 2-4 in league

By Jason De Mars
Staff Writer

As winter arrives so does winter sports for River City High School, and with winter sports comes basketball, and with basketball comes the j.v. boys team.

Starting off their season in a game against Foothill, they lost 67-54. The team would have two more losses against Christian Brothers and Livingston before they had their first win over Winters 63-51.

"The players on this team are friends on and off the court," said Coach Jamie King, j.v. boys head coach. "They pick each other up when times are tough, and have the potential to be devastating defensively."

After the j.v. boy Raiders' win over Winters, they played Galt and lost 24-48, but in their next game against the Rio Linda Knights the Raiders toppled over them with a score of 55-38. A victory that was won in the beginning of the game.

With key players like Robert Washington, Frankie Rodriquez, Tom Godwin, and Mike Fonbuena, Coach King said, "Our teams goal is to have other teams and coaches respect how hard we play. If we can gain their respect the wins and losses will take care of themselves. Coach Jamie King added, "This is a group of young men who are a joy to be around. I hope I can turn them into a great team with lasting basketball memories."

RC j.v. girls beat Rio Linda

As fall sports come to an end and winter sports begin the jayvee girls basketball team push themselves to be a better team.

Playing their first game against Argonaut the girls suffered an "embarrassing" defeat 54-8 but Heather Fristoe, a freshman, said, "We have a very good team but we just had a bad game. At least we kept them under 60," she added with a smile.

In the team's most recent game against the Rio Linda Knights they won with a score of 56-18. "Defense won the game for us," said Heather Fristoe

Mr. Logan sky dives to cure mid-life crisis

By Michael Slack
Staff Writer

Throughout history, men have dreamed of flying like birds. Unfortunately, due to certain physical limitations flying is not completely possible. The next best thing is skydiving, or BASE (acronym for building, antenna, span, and earth) jumping. Although it is relatively safe, it can become fatal. These two extreme sports have captivated the hearts of many thrill seekers around the world. It is estimated by the United States Parachute Association that 300,000 people of all ages take their first jump every year. One of these people is Mr. Logan, the physical science teacher here at River City.

About nine years ago Mr. Logan decided to go sky diving with his wife. "It was a midlife crisis, and we already fly planes, so the next thing to do was jump out of one," he explained. Before he jumped out of the plane he didn't think he would be scared, but he was surprised at his reaction to skydiving. While he was falling from 8,000 feet, his body went into panic and he started to hyperventilate, "My body panicked. I had no control. There was nothing beneath me," he said. Once he landed from his four-minute ordeal, he lay down on the ground, and was grateful to be there. "It's an experience that I never want to go through again," he said.

Fortunately for Mr. Logan there were not any accidents. For some people, their experience doesn't end so happily. According to Aerodyne Research there have been over 50 fatal accidents this year.

RC jayvee wrestlers medal in tournament

By Michael Slack
Staff Writer

"Wrestlers are a sluggish set, and of dubious health. They sleep out their lives, and whenever they depart from their regular diet they fall seriously ill." The ancient Greek philosopher Plato once said this. Wrestlers do go through an enormous amount of trouble to maintain weight, even if it means starving. Why? Because throughout history wrestling has been a popular sport. The origins of it have been traced back 15,000 years to ancient cave drawings. Since then, wrestling hasn't changed much. It still is composed of one-on-one competition of pins and throws, and now there are three main types: Greco-Roman, freestyle, and collegiate.

The Greco-Roman and freestyle forms found their origins in the eastern Mediterranean, the home of the ancient Greeks. In these ancient times, the art of wrestling was a major part of the youths' everyday lives. Wrestling is a sport that demands a high degree of physical strength and skill.

Collegiate wrestling is a more modern form of wrestling. It is the form of wrestling practiced here at River City.

"The wrestling team has been doing well so far," stated Coach Ferris. At the j.v. tournament in Amador, Soslan Butayev and Alex Timeshenko received first place medals. Second place medals went to Jason De Mars, Johnny Sweeten, and Ben Hannowell. Third place medals were awarded to Bryon Groesbeck, Ryan Fiddler, and Justin Hunt. A fourth place medal went to Clency Pulido.

The team is at the beginning of their season and doing well, said Coach Costanza. Coming in 1 and 3 with in the league, with the win over Rio Linda, the girls have many more games to go. So far they have played Lindhurst, Marysville, Rio Linda, and one tournament.

Cathy Costanza hopes to make the playoffs. Defense is an important part of the training and Coach Costanza said the team is working really hard and is playing great defense. She indicated that this is a multi-talented varsity team.

Find your innate jock potential with the River City High jock quiz

By Jason De Mars
Staff Writer

When you walk down the halls of our crowded school you probably see a "jock" walking down the same hall as you, whether it is a football jock, soccer jock, basketball jock, or another jock. Take this quiz to see if you qualify to be a jock, or if you already are one see how high you score.

How big of a jock are you?

1. What do you think of showering with your teammates?
   A.) Sure, it doesn't bother me.
   B.) Depends on which team I'm on
   C.) Fine as long as they don't gawk.
   D.) Never, rather shower at home

2. What NFL team would you pick?
   A.) Forty-niners
   B.) Dallas Cowboys
   C.) Raiders
   D.) Grizzlies

3. If you were faced with playing one sport for the rest of your life you would play
   A.) Football
   B.) Basketball
   C.) Volleyball
   D.) Golf

4. Being a good sport about winning and losing is
   A.) mandatory! I must win and lose gracefully.
   B.) part of the game.
   C.) to show the other team how much better my team is.
   D.) a good thing, but, be a jerk about losing by spitting on your hand before you shake the other teams hands.

Points:
1. A= +3, B= +2, C= +4, D= -1
2. A= +4, B= +3, C= +1, D= -5
3. A= +5, B= +4, C= +3, D= -2
4. A= +5, B=+4, C= -2, D= -3

13~18 = You have a strong sense of team spirit and know where you stand as anathlete. You take pride in being part of a team and do your best to win. You possess an atheletic heart and have an undying love for sports. Most of all you are a jock or qualify to be one. So keep beeing the wonderful jock you are.

9~12 = You are good at sports and have all the talent needed, but your heart isn't in the game you are currently playing. Find the sport you love and stick with it because you will excell in it. You are on your way to being a jock! Congratulations.

1~8 = You like sports but are not what an athlete would call "all-league" material. It's better if you just play sports for the fun of it and not get involved in with a real athletic team. However, if you do, try to aquire some athletic skill.

-9~0 = It's obvious you know nothing about sports or sports-related activities, and you have no potential whatsoever of being considered a jock or have any jock qualities. Keep away from sports unless it is a computer or play station game. Now, if you chose Grizzlies as the NFL team, you are seriously lacking in football awareness, because there is no such NFL team as the Grizzlies.

The man then attempted unsuccessfully to flee out the back of the residence, and after about ten minutes, gave himself up to arrest. Meanwhile, the suspect's girlfriend visited the house and was found in possession of several syringes. She was cited.

Dec. 13, 12:05 a.m.

The fire department extinguished a vehicle fire on Hardy Dr. An officer spotted a bottle of barbecue lighter fluid near it, on fire, with a burnt rag next to the bottle. Another officer had contacted three males in a car parked near the burning vehicle, before the signs of arson were discovered. The men had told him they were just "watching the fire," and then left, but the officer had recorded their car license number.

Coroner's report: fight with police did not cause death of 23-year old Woodland man

The Yolo Co. Coroner's Office has concluded an autopsy on Juan Gabriel Nieto, a 23-year old Woodland resident who died at Woodland Memorial Hospital Dec. 3 after a physical altercation with Woodland police.

The autopsy report shows superficial injuries to Nieto's face, arms, legs and abdomen, with no bone fractures.

The coroner's office does not believe the injuries were related to the cause of death, and reports alcohol, amphetamine and a "toxic" level of methamphetamine in Nieto's blood. Cause of death is still undetermined pending further analysis.

Some of Nieto's relatives have alleged police brutality in the case.

BeautyShots.

Your baby is beautiful. And may be the picture of health. But there's also a one in four chance he or she isn't up-to-date with immunizations. One in four.

Your child needs more than 12 shots over the course of five visits, before the age of two.

So never assume your baby is on schedule. Ask your doctor at every visit.

That way, you'll be certain you're giving your child a fair shot. And that's the most beautiful thing of all.

For more information, please call the National Immunization Information Hotline at 1-800-232-2522.
